Why We Are All Mimics. "If we did not cough in church, the human race would not exist." And the professor, twiddling a piece of chalk in his hand, regarded the sophomores with a quizzical smile.

"What I mean," he continued, "is that the cause of coughing is the cause of our survival. That cause is mimicry. Mimicry is a better life preserver than fleetness or strength. For by mimicry we manage not to attract at tention, and in prehistoric times they who attracted attention were hunted down by the tribe and roasted for diner or hunted down by the saber tooth tiger and taken raw. "Since those dark days mimlery has been instinctive with us. Mimiery is what causes us to follow the fashions. It causes us, when in England, to say 'cawn't' and 'lawf.' If your friend yawns, you yawn-that's mimiery. If he laughs, you laugh-mimicry again. If he snuffles, you snuffle mimicry And if he coughs in church, straight way you and all the rest of the congregation cough, the reason being the same one which saved our forefathers from extermination."-New York Press.

Famous Floggers.

Among English schoolmasters whose names have come down to posterity with the dubious reputation of great floggers Dr. Busby of Westminste school is the generally acknowledged chief.

was particularly anxious to retain his Of him it is recorded that, one of his own pleasantly lucrative position. Conhead boys having insulted a young French viscount who came to the in receipt of a petition in which the school to demand satisfaction, he flogman's years of falthful service and ged the viscount first for the blood thirsty intentions and next his friend who was the bearer of his challenge. The governor sent for him and said Dr. Valpy, too, who edited an edition gravely, "It appears from this petition of the classics, was a potent wielder of the rod. Archdeacon Groom, who was a pupil of his, tells a story in illustrathat you have been in the penitentiary tion of his prowess. One of the boys had been flogged by the redoubtable formed faithfully every duty that has dominie, and the lad's father came to come in your way to the best of your complain.

"Sir," said Valpy to him, "I flogged "I have," answered the agent, his your son because he richly deserved it. If he again deserves it, I shall flog him again, and," rising, "if you come here, sir, interfering with my duty I the air of one conferring a priceless shall flog you.'

A Famous Architect's Trick.

When Sir Christopher Wren was building the town hall of Windsor, a fidgety member of the corporation, so the story goes, insisted that the roo required further support and desired the architect to add more pillars. In vain did Sir Christopher assure him that the danger was imaginary. H knew better. The alarm spread, and the great architect was worried into adding the desired columns.

Years passed, and in later times when architect and patrons were dead, cleaning operations in the roof re vealed the fact that the supposed additional supports did not touch the roof by two inches, though this was not perceptible to the gazers below.

By this ingenious expedient did Wren pacify his critics, while vindicating his own architectural skill to future gener

Next day it was an egg, and so on. Every day there was something take and put off with the remark, "I'm not like other landladles-I'm telling you. Of course there was never any re duction in Pat's bill. One Saturday his bill came to a larger amount than usual.
